

Four world maps for real total agricultural income in 2030 (2001 =1)

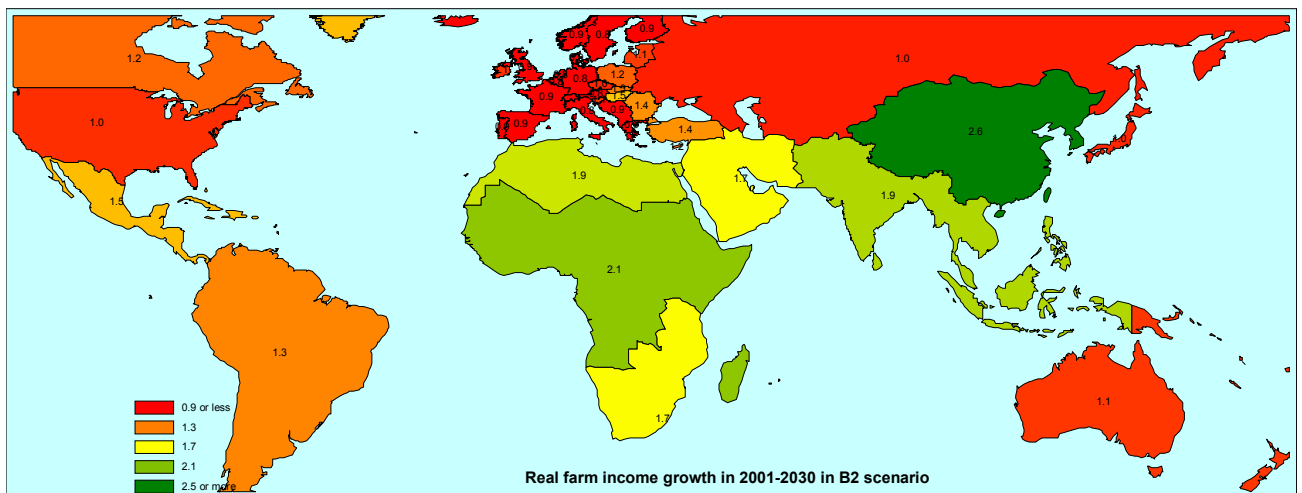

Real income growth of agri-food complex is relatively high in developing and transition countries. Real farm income decreases or is stable in high income countries (Japan, EU15, USA).

In comparison with A1 is real farm income is relatively high in accession and developing countries and low in high income countries such as the EU15.

Real agri-food income growth is low in countries outside the Trans-Atlantic market.
For countries within this market real agricultural income is highest.

Real agri-food income growth is low in the B2 scenario..